

THE KANSAS CITY STAR.

VOL. 12, NO. 45,

KANSAS CITY MO., MONDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1885.—LAST EDITION.

PRICE TWO CENTS.

HENDRICKS AND HILL.

TO BE THE NEXT DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

Thus Senator Evarts Says it Will Be—A Democrat Says the Republican Ticket Will be Evarts and Logan West Troy's Postal Troubles—Other Notes.

Special Telegram to The Star.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 9.—"Hendricks and Hill will be the ticket at the Democratic national convention of 1888," said Senator Evarts last evening while chatting with some friends at Wormley's. "Nobody can guess what the platform will be, but it is sure to be more or less the absence of a civil service reform plank," added another gentleman.

"Yes, I think I can name the ticket at the Republican national convention for three years hence," said a prominent Democrat to-day. "It will be Evarts and Logan West Troy's Postal Troubles—Other Notes."

A well known federal official in the treasury department said to the reporter: "Evarts and Hill would not allow the use of his name again in a presidential convention. 'His plans are even now partially formed for retirement at the close of his term,'" continued the official. "Don't you see that he is not attempting to take advantage of his position to gather about him a strong following in a political sense?"

A number of prominent people from West Troy, N. Y., reached Washington about daylight a few days ago and aroused all of their acquaintances and several officials of the government to whom they related their troubles. This is a growing, ambitious little city of perhaps 10,000 population across the river from Troy proper. West Troy is a presidential postoffice where the special delivery mail has been established, and its citizens are hotly jealous of its bigger rival on the east bank. On several occasions during the past few years the Trojans have endeavored to extend their postal delivery to the little city and make it a branch of the Troy postoffice, but the West-siders have not succeeded in defeating the attempts of their neighbors. At times they have delegations visited Washington from the rival cities to appeal to the federal authorities, but people prefer to travel to the postoffice for their mail rather than be an appendage to the hated rival. Nor will they not receive letters from Troy carriers—ten thousand times no! When the new special delivery system was introduced the West-siders saw the opportunity of making a point with the new postmaster general, and nearly succeeded. Colonel Vilas went so far as to order a consolidation of the two postoffices with West Troy as a branch. Zedath! but there was blood on the moon! The West-siders pointed to West Troy as a second Troy, and their wives were kept hot with remonstrances and the mails were full of protests. Down here they got hold of Judge Draper, of Albany, their old friend and the whole Trojan outrage was stopped. But it is only a truce. Both sides are sleeping on their arms and the siege of Troy is likely to become again celebrated in the consolidation of the two offices. Then the president will be appealed to as Arthur and Garfield and Grant were.

"Yes it is a somewhat lonely life," said the president the other day to an old friend who called. "From the breakfast table up stairs, to the library down to lunch; up again to examine my papers, down again to dinner, and then, perhaps, a drive. I so often times feel as if I was in prison." Mr. Cleve and never walks out on the streets, as Grant was wont to do, but remains closely in the executive mansion day after day, except the fortnightly visit to church or the theatre. That is a sad hour of yours," said a general, "or two or three ago, to Charles Richardson, the son of one of his clients. I am pleased to know it for $30,000 have gone into that building, and I have never seen it," replied the judge. It is stated as a remarkable fact that the judge has never looked at his expensive new residence. The architect was given carte blanche and the bills were paid. The result is strange, which would draw crowds as a curiosity if it could be exhibited around the country in a tent.

"Ah, Patrick is that you? How is your mistress?" said Secretary Lamar the other evening to a waiter in a household where he made frequent calls. In his haste recognition of the maid, he descended upon a glass of beer on the cloth, but deftly covered the stain with his napkin.

Secretary Lamar has given up Senator McHerr's house and has taken apartments at the Portland.

The St. Louis Postoffice.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—"I do not know that I shall make any recommendation to the president," said Postmaster General Vilas in reference to the appointment of a new postmaster. "I suppose I will be asked to do so. I will probably express my views, but I will certainly hesitate to make any recommendation, and it would be almost presumption for me to do so. The president has heard so much of this case that he knows quite as much as I do or even more, and he is quite able to form his own judgment."

There is no doubt both the president and postmaster general will be heavily glad to be over and done with the St. Louis case. It has become a genuine cause célèbre, and it is now talked about all over Washington.

"There has been more work done on to influence the appointing officers one way or another than in any other case of this kind," said the president's former commission.

The president still has his sister, Mrs. Hoyt, visiting at the White house, and she is likely to remain until nearly time for the assembling of congress. Since her arrival here she has met a number of the leading society ladies of Washington, among whom she has become a decided favorite. It is not expected that she will remain until after the session of the White house is over, but deftly covered the stain with his napkin.

The White House grounds are being improved this fall by the head gardener, Pfeifer. Crocuses have been thickly planted along the lawn sloping south towards the conservatory, and next spring that portion which is in view of the president's bed chamber will present a scene of surpassing beauty.

The grounds have been up to date, and a large bed of rhododendrons and azaleas planted, which will be an agreeable sight when the buds burst in May.

Secretary Lamar has given up Senator McHerr's house and has taken apartments at the Portland.

The St. Louis Postoffice.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—"I do not know that I shall make any recommendation to the president," said Postmaster General Vilas in reference to the appointment of a new postmaster. "I suppose I will be asked to do so. I will probably express my views, but I will certainly hesitate to make any recommendation, and it would be almost presumption for me to do so. The president has heard so much of this case that he knows quite as much as I do or even more, and he is quite able to form his own judgment."

There is no doubt both the president and postmaster general will be heavily glad to be over and done with the St. Louis case. It has become a genuine cause célèbre, and it is now talked about all over Washington.

"There has been more work done on to influence the appointing officers one way or another than in any other case of this kind," said the president's former commission.

The president still has his sister, Mrs. Hoyt, visiting at the White house, and she is likely to remain until nearly time for the assembling of congress. Since her arrival here she has met a number of the leading society ladies of Washington, among whom she has become a decided favorite. It is not expected that she will remain until after the session of the White house is over, but deftly covered the stain with his napkin.

The White House grounds are being improved this fall by the head gardener, Pfeifer. Crocuses have been thickly planted along the lawn sloping south towards the conservatory, and next spring that portion which is in view of the president's bed chamber will present a scene of surpassing beauty.

The grounds have been up to date, and a large bed of rhododendrons and azaleas planted, which will be an agreeable sight when the buds burst in May.

Secretary Lamar has given up Senator McHerr's house and has taken apartments at the Portland.

The St. Louis Postoffice.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—When Judge Trenholm, the new civil service commissioner, reached Washington to-day he joined by Messrs. Eaton and Edgerton and they proceeded to the office of the president and the respects to the president. The members of the new board of commissioners then qualified and at once held their first session. Messrs. Edgerton and Trenholm, as soon as the work of the commission is mapped out, will return to their homes to settle up their private affairs.

The Free Trade Conference.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Hon. Frank Hurd has gone to Chicago to attend the free trade conference on Nov. 10 and 11. Before reaching Washington he said that in his opinion a circular would be adopted and circulated broad over the country having in view the better education of the people on the subject of free trade. Mr. Hurd declared nothing could prevent the consideration of the question during the present session of congress.

Messrs. Hard, Ward, Beecher, David A.

Wells, Henry Waterson and a number of other prominent free-traders, are expected to attend the conference.

The Telephone Suits.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The argument in the telephone cases was heard this morning by Secretary Lamar, Assistant Secretary Mulloway and Jenks, and Patent Commissioner Morris. The question at issue is whether the secretary of the interior should advise the attorney to bring suits to set aside the bell patent. On that point of invention we are read by the attorneys representing several companies.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 9.—"Hendricks and Hill will be the ticket at the Democratic national convention of 1888," said Senator Evarts last evening while chatting with some friends at Wormley's. "Nobody can guess what the platform will be, but it is sure to be more or less the absence of a civil service reform plank," added another gentleman.

"Yes, I think I can name the ticket at the Republican national convention for three years hence," said a prominent Democrat to-day. "It will be Evarts and Logan West Troy's Postal Troubles—Other Notes."

A well known federal official in the treasury department said to the reporter: "Evarts and Hill would not allow the use of his name again in a presidential convention. 'His plans are even now partially formed for retirement at the close of his term,'" continued the official.

"Don't you see that he is not attempting to take advantage of his position to gather about him a strong following in a political sense?"

A number of prominent people from West Troy, N. Y., reached Washington about daylight a few days ago and aroused all of their acquaintances and several officials of the government to whom they related their troubles. This is a growing, ambitious little city of perhaps 10,000 population across the river from Troy proper. West Troy is a presidential postoffice where the special delivery mail has been established, and its citizens are hotly jealous of its bigger rival on the east bank. On several occasions during the past few years the Trojans have endeavored to extend their postal delivery to the little city and make it a branch of the Troy postoffice, but the West-siders have not succeeded in defeating the attempts of their neighbors. At times they have delegations visited Washington from the rival cities to appeal to the federal authorities, but people prefer to travel to the postoffice for their mail rather than be an appendage to the hated rival. Nor will they not receive letters from Troy carriers—ten thousand times no! When the new special delivery system was introduced the West-siders saw the opportunity of making a point with the new postmaster general, and nearly succeeded. Colonel Vilas went so far as to order a consolidation of the two postoffices with West Troy as a branch. Zedath! but there was blood on the moon! The West-siders pointed to West Troy as a second Troy, and their wives were kept hot with remonstrances and the mails were full of protests. Down here they got hold of Judge Draper, of Albany, their old friend and the whole Trojan outrage was stopped. But it is only a truce. Both sides are sleeping on their arms and the siege of Troy is likely to become again celebrated in the consolidation of the two offices. Then the president will be appealed to as Arthur and Garfield and Grant were.

"Yes, I think I can name the ticket at the Republican national convention for three years hence," said a prominent Democrat to-day. "It will be Evarts and Logan West Troy's Postal Troubles—Other Notes."

A well known federal official in the treasury department said to the reporter: "Evarts and Hill would not allow the use of his name again in a presidential convention. 'His plans are even now partially formed for retirement at the close of his term,'" continued the official.

"Don't you see that he is not attempting to take advantage of his position to gather about him a strong following in a political sense?"

A number of prominent people from West Troy, N. Y., reached Washington about daylight a few days ago and aroused all of their acquaintances and several officials of the government to whom they related their troubles. This is a growing, ambitious little city of perhaps 10,000 population across the river from Troy proper. West Troy is a presidential postoffice where the special delivery mail has been established, and its citizens are hotly jealous of its bigger rival on the east bank. On several occasions during the past few years the Trojans have endeavored to extend their postal delivery to the little city and make it a branch of the Troy postoffice, but the West-siders have not succeeded in defeating the attempts of their neighbors. At times they have delegations visited Washington from the rival cities to appeal to the federal authorities, but people prefer to travel to the postoffice for their mail rather than be an appendage to the hated rival. Nor will they not receive letters from Troy carriers—ten thousand times no! When the new special delivery system was introduced the West-siders saw the opportunity of making a point with the new postmaster general, and nearly succeeded. Colonel Vilas went so far as to order a consolidation of the two postoffices with West Troy as a branch. Zedath! but there was blood on the moon! The West-siders pointed to West Troy as a second Troy, and their wives were kept hot with remonstrances and the mails were full of protests. Down here they got hold of Judge Draper, of Albany, their old friend and the whole Trojan outrage was stopped. But it is only a truce. Both sides are sleeping on their arms and the siege of Troy is likely to become again celebrated in the consolidation of the two offices. Then the president will be appealed to as Arthur and Garfield and Grant were.

"Yes, I think I can name the ticket at the Republican national convention for three years hence," said a prominent Democrat to-day. "It will be Evarts and Logan West Troy's Postal Troubles—Other Notes."

A well known federal official in the treasury department said to the reporter: "Evarts and Hill would not allow the use of his name again in a presidential convention. 'His plans are even now partially formed for retirement at the close of his term,'" continued the official.

"Don't you see that he is not attempting to take advantage of his position to gather about him a strong following in a political sense?"

A number of prominent people from West Troy, N. Y., reached Washington about daylight a few days ago and aroused all of their acquaintances and several officials of the government to whom they related their troubles. This is a growing, ambitious little city of perhaps 10,000 population across the river from Troy proper. West Troy is a presidential postoffice where the special delivery mail has been established, and its citizens are hotly jealous of its bigger rival on the east bank. On several occasions during the past few years the Trojans have endeavored to extend their postal delivery to the little city and make it a branch of the Troy postoffice, but the West-siders have not succeeded in defeating the attempts of their neighbors. At times they have delegations visited Washington from the rival cities to appeal to the federal authorities, but people prefer to travel to the postoffice for their mail rather than be an appendage to the hated rival. Nor will they not receive letters from Troy carriers—ten thousand times no! When the new special delivery system was introduced the West-siders saw the opportunity of making a point with the new postmaster general, and nearly succeeded. Colonel Vilas went so far as to order a consolidation of the two postoffices with West Troy as a branch. Zedath! but there was blood on the moon! The West-siders pointed to West Troy as a second Troy, and their wives were kept hot with remonstrances and the mails were full of protests. Down here they got hold of Judge Draper, of Albany, their old friend and the whole Trojan outrage was stopped. But it is only a truce. Both sides are sleeping on their arms and the siege of Troy is likely to become again celebrated in the consolidation of the two offices. Then the president will be appealed to as Arthur and Garfield and Grant were.

"Yes, I think I can name the ticket at the Republican national convention for three years hence," said a prominent Democrat to-day. "It will be Evarts and Logan West Troy's Postal Troubles—Other Notes."

A well known federal official in the treasury department said to the reporter: "Evarts and Hill would not allow the use of his name again in a presidential convention. 'His plans are even now partially formed for retirement at the close of his term,'" continued the official.

"Don't you see that he is not attempting to take advantage of his position to gather about him a strong following in a political sense?"

A number of prominent people from West Troy, N. Y., reached Washington about daylight a few days ago and aroused all of their acquaintances and several officials of the government to whom they related their troubles. This is a growing, ambitious little city of perhaps 10,000 population across the river from Troy proper. West Troy is a presidential postoffice where the special delivery mail has been established, and its citizens are hotly jealous of its bigger rival on the east bank. On several occasions during the past few years the Trojans have endeavored to extend their postal delivery to the little city and make it a branch of the Troy postoffice, but the West-siders have not succeeded in defeating the attempts of their neighbors. At times they have delegations visited Washington from the rival cities to appeal to the federal authorities, but people prefer to travel to the postoffice for their mail rather than be an appendage to the hated rival. Nor will they not receive letters from Troy carriers—ten thousand times no! When the new special delivery system was introduced the West-siders saw the opportunity of making a point with the new postmaster general, and nearly succeeded. Colonel Vilas went so far as to order a consolidation of the two postoffices with West Troy as a branch. Zedath! but there was blood on the moon! The West-siders pointed to West Troy as a second Troy, and their wives were kept hot with remonstrances and the mails were full of protests. Down here they got hold of Judge Draper, of Albany, their old friend and the whole Trojan outrage was stopped. But it is only a truce. Both sides are sleeping on their arms and the siege of Troy is likely to become again celebrated in the consolidation of the two offices. Then the president will be appealed to as Arthur and Garfield and Grant were.

"Yes, I think I can name the ticket at the Republican national convention for three years hence," said a prominent Democrat to-day. "It will be Evarts and Logan West Troy's Postal Troubles—Other Notes."

A well known federal official in the treasury department said to the reporter: "Evarts and Hill would not allow the use of his name again in a presidential convention. 'His plans are even now partially formed for retirement at the close of his term,'" continued the official.

"Don't you see that he is not attempting to take advantage of his position to gather about him a strong following in a political sense?"

A number of prominent people from West Troy, N. Y., reached Washington about daylight a few days ago and aroused all of their acquaintances and several officials of the government to whom they related their troubles. This is a growing, ambitious little city of perhaps 10,000 population across the river from Troy proper. West Troy is a presidential postoffice where the special delivery mail has been established, and its citizens are hotly jealous of its bigger rival on the east bank. On several occasions during the past few years the Trojans have endeavored to extend their postal delivery to the little city and make it a branch of the Troy postoffice, but the West-siders have not succeeded in defeating the attempts of their neighbors. At times they have delegations visited Washington from the rival cities to appeal to the federal authorities, but people prefer to travel to the postoffice for their mail rather than be an appendage to the hated rival. Nor will they not receive letters from Troy carriers—ten thousand times no! When the new special delivery system was introduced the West-siders saw the opportunity of making a point with the new postmaster general, and nearly succeeded. Colonel Vilas went so far as to order a consolidation of the two postoffices with West Troy as a branch. Zedath! but there was blood on the moon! The West-siders pointed to West Troy as a second Troy, and their wives were kept hot with remonstrances and the mails were full of protests. Down here they got hold of Judge Draper, of Albany, their old friend and the whole Trojan outrage was stopped. But it is only a truce. Both sides are sleeping on their arms and the siege of Troy is likely to become again celebrated in the consolidation of the two offices. Then the president will be appealed to as Arthur and Garfield and Grant were.

"Yes, I think I can name the ticket at the Republican national convention for three years hence," said a prominent Democrat to-day. "It will be Evarts and Logan West Troy's Postal Troubles—Other Notes."

A well known federal official in the treasury department said to the reporter: "Evarts and Hill would not allow the use of his name again in a presidential convention. 'His plans are even now partially formed for retirement at the close of his term,'" continued the official.

"Don't you see that he is not attempting to take advantage of his position to gather about him a strong following in a political sense?"

A number of prominent people from West Troy, N. Y., reached Washington about daylight a few days ago and aroused all of their acquaintances and several officials of the government to whom they related their troubles. This is a growing, ambitious little city of perhaps 10,000 population across the river from Troy proper. West Troy is a presidential postoffice where the special delivery mail has been established, and its citizens are hotly jealous of its bigger rival on the east bank. On several occasions during the past few years the Trojans have endeavored to extend their postal delivery to the little city and make it a branch of the Troy postoffice, but the West-siders have not succeeded in defeating the attempts of their neighbors. At times they have delegations visited Washington from the rival cities to appeal to the federal authorities, but people prefer to travel to the postoffice for their mail rather than be an appendage to the hated rival. Nor will they not receive letters from Troy carriers—ten thousand times no! When the new special delivery system was introduced the West-siders saw the opportunity of making a point with the new postmaster general, and nearly succeeded. Colonel Vilas went so far as to order a consolidation of the two postoffices with West Troy as a branch. Zedath! but there was blood on the moon! The West-siders pointed to West Troy as a second Troy, and their wives were kept hot with remonstrances and the mails were full of protests. Down here they got hold of Judge Draper, of Albany, their old friend and the whole Trojan outrage was stopped. But it is only a truce. Both sides are sleeping on their arms and the siege of Troy is likely to become again celebrated in the consolidation of the two offices. Then the president will be appealed to as Arthur and Garfield and Grant were.

"Yes, I think I can name the ticket at the Republican national convention for three years hence," said a prominent Democrat to-day. "It will be Evarts and Logan West Troy's Postal Troubles—Other Notes."

A well known federal official in the treasury department said to the reporter: "Evarts and Hill would not allow the use of his name again in a presidential convention. 'His plans are even now partially formed for retirement at the close of his term,'" continued the official.

"Don't you see that he is not attempting to take advantage of his position to gather about him a strong following in a political sense?"

A number of prominent people from West Troy, N. Y., reached Washington about daylight a few days ago and aroused all of their acquaintances and several officials of the government to whom they related their troubles. This is a growing, ambitious little city of perhaps 10,000 population across the river from Troy proper. West Troy is a presidential postoffice where the special delivery mail has been established, and its citizens are hotly jealous of its bigger rival on the east bank. On several occasions during the past few years the Trojans have endeavored to extend their postal delivery to the little city and make it a branch of the Troy postoffice, but the West-siders have not succeeded in defeating the attempts of their neighbors. At times they have delegations visited Washington from the rival cities to appeal to the federal authorities, but people prefer to travel to the postoffice for their mail rather than be an appendage to the hated rival. Nor will they not receive letters from Troy carriers—ten thousand times no! When the new special delivery system was introduced the West-siders saw the opportunity of making a point with the new postmaster general, and nearly succeeded. Colonel Vilas went so far as to order a consolidation of the two postoffices

THE KANSAS CITY STAR

115 WEST SIXTH STREET.

KANSAS CITY. — MISSOURI.

This is published every evening (Sun. excepted). Served by carriers. Kansas City Wyandotte and other contiguous towns at ten cents per copy, when served by carriers.

Twelve cents per copy, when served by carriers.

By mail, postage prepaid, fifty cents per copy.

The post office at their house can secure it by postal card, request, or order through telephone.

No one can be compelled to do this, please make immediate complaint to the office.

The office is open at the post office at Kansas City, for transmission of the mail, from 12 m. to 12 m. daily.

This paper prints and publishes exclusively the full day press reports and a large line of special telegrams.

This is a larger average-daily circulation than any other daily newspaper published between St. Louis and San Francisco.

Address, THE STAR, KANSAS CITY, MO.

MONDAY, NOV. 9, 1885.

PROBABLY. Generally fair, warmer weather, variable winds.

State of the thermometer Nov. 9, furnished by C. B. Lichtenberg, optician, 717 Main st.

Minimum, 39°; maximum, 60°; mean, 49.5.

A.M., 52°; P.M., 62°; 12 o'clock, 54°; 45; 10 o'clock, 49°.

M.—1 o'clock, 60°.

A.M., 52°; 12 o'clock, 54°; 45; 10 o'clock, 49°.

Total for the week, $8,690.

Daily average for the week, $1,478.2

WITH bank clearings forty per cent greater than in the first week in November last year, and building increasing more than 100 per cent, Kansas City seems to be progressing in a very healthful manner.

The Chicago Tribune has inaugurated a war on the Bell Telephone company, and contributes much valuable matter to the history of this important invention in its efforts to show that the Bell patents were illegally obtained, and are, therefore, void.

Announcements.

To-night the "Tigers," by Kelly and Mason, will be the attraction at the Coates. Kelly and Mason are very clever comedians, and their play is said to be a most amusing jumble.

At the Music hall Professor James Irving Cribble will begin a series of a week's lectures on "The Land of the Mikado." These lectures are profusely illustrated, and by those who have seen them are said to be in the highest degree interesting.

KANSAS CITY'S DESTINY.

It is Wayne World.

Kansas City is destined to be the largest city between Chicago and the Pacific ocean.

The Lawrence Journal.

Among the most successful of the many thriving 2-cent evening papers, THE KANSAS CITY STAR stands well up to the mark.

It is prospering in its new gathering, independent in its political preferences, honest in all things, and devoted to the welfare of the community.

Other cases fined were as follows:

Twelve drunks, three disturbers of the peace, and one for fast driving.

FOOD ANALYSIS.

City Chemist Sloan Receiving Specimens of Food and Milk for Examination.

Sloan and his wife are in the city.

The memorial Lutheran chapel, Sixth street and Tracy avenue, was dedicated yesterday afternoon. The morning sermon was preached by Rev. S. B. Barnitz, western secretary of Lutheran missions. Dr. Moines, Dr. Captain Snyder and Officers Hause, Hayde, Flanagan and Hayes did some raiding last night, "pulling" a number of houses of ill fame, and capturing numerous inmates and frequenters. In John Harland's place eight inmates and nine frequenters were captured. Laura Howard reported in the record, according to her, with six colored girls, and received the names of the persons. The others went over to tomorrow morning. Other cases fined were as follows:

Twelve drunks, three disturbers of the peace, and one for fast driving.

A Novelist.

Major Clark, Pat Galvin and A. J. Smith were fined $10 each by Judge Worthen, this morning for playing poker in the Tremont house.

Smith got the worst of it, losing $70.

He made complaint and all three were fined.

JURY ENPANNELED.

Alderman McClinton says that the council will cause the railroad company to regret its action in tearing down the steps leading from Bluff street to the railroad tracks.

He has been consulting the city counselor and it is probable that action will be begun against the company for the first week in November.

The appearance of blue coats at Tacoma, W. T., has settled the anti-Chinese rioters there in very short order. The mob was greatly frightened at the course affairs have taken. The mayor of Tacoma and the police judge of the county are among the number arrested, and indeed all the parties are petty officials and not Knights of Labor or strikers at all. This is just what might have been expected. Whenever trouble is stirred up over a labor question it may always be depended upon that political demagogues will be at the bottom of it. Men who work for a living have entirely too much at stake to be able to afford to stir up any violence they can avoid.

WITH all due modesty THE STAR desires to call attention to its superb telegraph service which includes both press reports and the most complete line of specials received by any evening paper in the world with possibly one exception. As instance the perfection of THE STAR's news service we desire to call attention to the achievements of Saturday when this paper gave the first information of the conviction of STEAD, editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, for the abduction of ELIZA ARMSTRONG, of Governor HILL's declaration of war on President CLEVELAND's civil service policy; of the terrible double tragedy at Jefferson Barracks, near St. Louis; of the remarkable confession of ELLIOTT, at Omaha; of MAHONE's determination to leave Virginia; of the probable end of the great Texas strike; of the great snow storms in the northwest; of the result of the railroad meeting in Chicago; and hundreds of other items of lesser importance. But these are sufficient to prove that THE STAR keeps right up with the times, as the good record of Saturday was but a repetition of each day's work in the week.

NOTWITHSTANDING the announcement recently made that JOHN McCULLOUGH was rapidly recovering his mental and physical health, and would soon be able to fill engagements on the stage, the great actor died peacefully at his residence in Philadelphia yesterday afternoon. His death was unexpected by all and was as much of a surprise to his physicians as to anyone else. The direct cause of his death was, the doctor asserts, an affection of the brain, caused by blood poisoning. The doctor also says the actor was not insane, and that taking him to the asylum at Bloomingdale was a mistake. The kiss which the lovers of "Locksley Hall" knew when their "spirits rushed together at the touching of the lips," which Fatima means when she says, "as long as we, as sweet as revenge," the kiss which Shelley sang as "the soft and sweet eclipse."

"When soul meets soul on lips' lips."

The kiss which the lovers of "Locksley Hall" knew when their "spirits rushed together at the touching of the lips," which Fatima means when she says, "as long as we, as sweet as revenge," the kiss which Shelley sang as "the soft and sweet eclipse."

"Come forth, sweet stars, and comfort Heavy heart."

This evening Greek George and Andrew Delmars will wrestle a match for $100 each and $100 additional money, at the Walmet street theater.

Both men are in fine shape and as Delmars is a noted wrestler the contest will prove very exciting.

Greek George does not care to be a power and science minister, but his companion did.

"A Terrible Mistake."

John Rockford, fatally injured by falling through an elevator hatchway.

John Rockford fell through an open elevator hatchway at the B. Grimes & Co.'s dry goods store, and was severely injured.

He was soon recognized in his death.

The piling of his pants from under his head to see a revolver pointed at him with the polite words of advice to "hold still," which he did. The thieves were seen on Ninth street and chase given by Deputy Marshal Chance, but they made their escape near the lake premises.

Rockford was a member of G. A. R. post No. 89, at Peabody, Kas., and the coroner telephoned the post information of his death.

A Bold Robbery.

Yesterday morning the city of Armstrong was visited by a gang of desperadoes who spared the citizens to that feeling of indignation rarely witnessed.

The chief robbery reported was that of M. Mairs on Ninth street, where they obtained $12 in currency and a gold watch and chain valued at $200. J. B. Brown next complained of their obtaining $32 and a gold watch valued at $65, and Mr. W. B. Dunmore reported the loss of $100 in greenbacks and silver, and a good deal more.

Mr. W. A. Armour and occupied by M. Cunningham as a grocery store.

Leave orders for Washington and Pittsburgh at the post office of A. Baker, Clean coat.

B. F. Berry is still selling real estate.

Buy your groceries at Richardson's.

Go to James D. Husted and secure a lot in Husted Place. He is offering extra bargains during the next ten days. This addition is the most beautiful in the city, being nicely located and easily accessible.

Rockford was a member of G. A. R. post No. 89, at Peabody, Kas., and the coroner telephoned the post information of his death.

A Terrible Mistake.

John Rockford, fatally injured by falling through an elevator hatchway.

John Rockford fell through an open elevator hatchway at the B. Grimes & Co.'s dry goods store, and was severely injured.

He was soon recognized in his death.

The piling of his pants from under his head to see a revolver pointed at him with the polite words of advice to "hold still," which he did. The thieves were seen on Ninth street and chase given by Deputy Marshal Chance, but they made their escape near the lake premises.

Rockford was a member of G. A. R. post No. 89, at Peabody, Kas., and the coroner telephoned the post information of his death.

A Bold Robbery.

Yesterday morning the city of Armstrong was visited by a gang of desperadoes who spared the citizens to that feeling of indignation rarely witnessed.

The chief robbery reported was that of M. Mairs on Ninth street, where they obtained $12 in currency and a gold watch and chain valued at $200. J. B. Brown next complained of their obtaining $32 and a gold watch valued at $65, and Mr. W. B. Dunmore reported the loss of $100 in greenbacks and silver, and a good deal more.

Mr. W. A. Armour and occupied by M. Cunningham as a grocery store.

Leave orders for Washington and Pittsburgh at the post office of A. Baker, Clean coat.

B. F. Berry is still selling real estate.

Buy your groceries at Richardson's.

Go to James D. Husted and secure a lot in Husted Place. He is offering extra bargains during the next ten days. This addition is the most beautiful in the city, being nicely located and easily accessible.

Rockford was a member of G. A. R. post No. 89, at Peabody, Kas., and the coroner telephoned the post information of his death.

A Terrible Mistake.

John Rockford, fatally injured by falling through an elevator hatchway.

John Rockford fell through an open elevator hatchway at the B. Grimes & Co.'s dry goods store, and was severely injured.

He was soon recognized in his death.

The piling of his pants from under his head to see a revolver pointed at him with the polite words of advice to "hold still," which he did. The thieves were seen on Ninth street and chase given by Deputy Marshal Chance, but they made their escape near the lake premises.

Rockford was a member of G. A. R. post No. 89, at Peabody, Kas., and the coroner telephoned the post information of his death.

A Bold Robbery.

Yesterday morning the city of Armstrong was visited by a gang of desperadoes who spared the citizens to that feeling of indignation rarely witnessed.

The chief robbery reported was that of M. Mairs on Ninth street, where they obtained $12 in currency and a gold watch and chain valued at $200. J. B. Brown next complained of their obtaining $32 and a gold watch valued at $65, and Mr. W. B. Dunmore reported the loss of $100 in greenbacks and silver, and a good deal more.

Mr. W. A. Armour and occupied by M. Cunningham as a grocery store.

Leave orders for Washington and Pittsburgh at the post office of A. Baker, Clean coat.

B. F. Berry is still selling real estate.

Buy your groceries at Richardson's.

Go to James D. Husted and secure a lot in Husted Place. He is offering extra bargains during the next ten days. This addition is the most beautiful in the city, being nicely located and easily accessible.

Rockford was a member of G. A. R. post No. 89, at Peabody, Kas., and the coroner telephoned the post information of his death.

A Bold Robbery.

Yesterday morning the city of Armstrong was visited by a gang of desperadoes who spared the citizens to that feeling of indignation rarely witnessed.

The chief robbery reported was that of M. Mairs on Ninth street, where they obtained $12 in currency and a gold watch and chain valued at $200. J. B. Brown next complained of their obtaining $32 and a gold watch valued at $65, and Mr. W. B. Dunmore reported the loss of $100 in greenbacks and silver, and a good deal more.

Mr. W. A. Armour and occupied by M. Cunningham as a grocery store.

Leave orders for Washington and Pittsburgh at the post office of A. Baker, Clean coat.

B. F. Berry is still selling real estate.

Buy your groceries at Richardson's.

Go to James D. Husted and secure a lot in Husted Place. He is offering extra bargains during the next ten days. This addition is the most beautiful in the city, being nicely located and easily accessible.

Rockford was a member of G. A. R. post No. 89, at Peabody, Kas., and the coroner telephoned the post information of his death.

A Bold Robbery.

Yesterday morning the city of Armstrong was visited by a gang of desperadoes who spared the citizens to that feeling of indignation rarely witnessed.

The chief robbery reported was that of M. Mairs on Ninth street, where they obtained $12 in currency and a gold watch and chain valued at $200. J. B. Brown next complained of their obtaining $32 and a gold watch valued at $65, and Mr. W. B. Dunmore reported the loss of $100 in greenbacks and silver, and a good deal more.

Mr. W. A. Armour and occupied by M. Cunningham as a grocery store.

Leave orders for Washington and Pittsburgh at the post office of A. Baker, Clean coat.

B. F. Berry is still selling real estate.

Buy your groceries at Richardson's.

Go to James D. Husted and secure a lot in Husted Place. He is offering extra bargains during the next ten days. This addition is the most beautiful in the city, being nicely located and easily accessible.

Rockford was a member of G. A. R. post No. 89, at Peabody, Kas., and the coroner telephoned the post information of his death.

A Bold Robbery.

Yesterday morning the city of Armstrong was visited by a gang of desperadoes who spared the citizens to that feeling of indignation rarely witnessed.

The chief robbery reported was that of M. Mairs on Ninth street, where they obtained $12 in currency and a gold watch and chain valued at $200. J. B. Brown next complained of their obtaining $32 and a gold watch valued at $65, and Mr. W. B. Dunmore reported the loss of $100 in greenbacks and silver, and a good deal more.

Mr. W. A. Armour and occupied by M. Cunningham as a grocery store.

Leave orders for Washington and Pittsburgh at the post office of A. Baker, Clean coat.

B. F. Berry is still selling real estate.

Buy your groceries at Richardson's.

Go to James D. Husted and secure a lot in Husted Place. He is offering extra bargains during the next ten days. This addition is the most beautiful in the city, being nicely located and easily accessible.

Rockford was a member of G. A. R. post No. 89, at Peabody, Kas., and the coroner telephoned the post information of his death.

A Bold Robbery.

Yesterday morning the city of Armstrong was visited by a gang of desperadoes who spared the citizens to that feeling of indignation rarely witnessed.

The chief robbery reported was that of M. Mairs on Ninth street, where they obtained $12 in currency and a gold watch and chain valued at $200. J. B. Brown next complained of their obtaining $32 and a gold watch valued at $65, and Mr. W. B. Dunmore reported the loss of $100 in greenbacks and silver, and a good deal more.

Mr. W. A. Armour and occupied by M. Cunningham as a grocery store.

Leave orders for Washington and Pittsburgh at the post office of A. Baker, Clean coat.

B. F. Berry is still selling real estate.

Buy your groceries at Richardson's.

Go to James D. Husted and secure a lot in Husted Place. He is offering extra bargains during the next ten days. This addition is the most beautiful in the city, being nicely located and easily accessible.

Rockford was a member of G. A. R. post No. 89, at Peabody, Kas., and the coroner telephoned the post information of his death.

A Bold Robbery.

Yesterday morning the city of Armstrong was visited by a gang of desperadoes who

